We're looking for your feedback

As a subscriber of White House email updates, you get messages from us from time to time to keep you in the loop on the President's priorities and what's going on at the White House and around the administration.

Today, we want to hear from you.

We create a lot of content – from the emails we send, to the charts, infographics, videos, and tools we feature on our website – and we want to make sure it's as interesting and informative as possible.

You have a unique stake in making it better, so we want to hear it straight from you:

What would you like to see more of in White House email communications?

I would like to read the White House's commitment to human rights, art. 18, 19 and 26.3, for peace between peoples and for their right to self-determination, including correction of boundaries established in the past.

What would you like to see less of in White House email communications?

I would like to see less the pursuit of individual whims of a few people in the local area, compared to the basic needs of many globally and especially of the youngest, poor, with fewer opportunities.

Anything else?

Is there anything else you want to tell us?

I would like to say to the President that I am sorry for the exclusion of Russia from the G8: if we love peace, we have to keep all doors open to dialogue, and impose sanctions only against the massacres of innocents.
